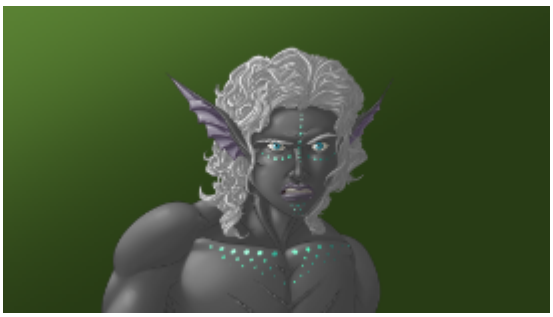
Chon-Tan



Home planet: Pangea

Biology

Chon-Tan are a temperamental and reserved species, also known as half-elves or forest imps. They are a difficult species to deal with. Their bodies are delicate, slender, and small, with an average height of 4 feet and a weight of less than 40 pounds. Their muscles and bones are extremely flexible.

Chon-Tan have pointed ears, and their skin can be gray, brown, or green. They have radiant-colored dots that glow in the dark and form patterns unique to each individual.

History and Society

The Chon-Tan once lived in the forests of a planet they called "Ago," along with other races, until humans invaded and expelled them. The rebellious humans who founded Pangea welcomed them into their society, and although they have successfully integrated, they are housed in separate neighborhoods from other species.

Locations

Pangea
Akra

Notable Chon-Tan

Jhaan

Revision #2
Created 2025-09-03 01:28:30 UTC by Ekospirit
Updated 2025-09-03 16:26:32 UTC by Ekospirit